To whom it may concern:

As the recently retired director of communications for Parker Aerospace, I am writing to recommend Warren Deacon and his company, New Bijou. I have worked directly with Warren Deacon for more than three decades. Warren was initially the manager of the videography department at Parker Aerospace, then later formed his own company, which Parker used heavily over the years for a variety of video projects.

Warren is highly skilled in a broad range of media capabilities, including video production and video and audio editing, as well as voice-over work. His deep bench of experience with clients, ranging from corporations like Parker to the entertainment industry, makes him a perfect fit for all sorts of projects.

At Parker Aerospace, a $2.5 billion supplier to the commercial and military aviation industries, Warren filmed, edited, and produced bimonthly video news programs, customer event reels, and marketing pieces. He was collaborative, creative, insightful, and highly dependable. He always met budget estimates and schedule deadlines.

Most video consultants specialize in one specific area; Warren brings skills in a wide variety of capabilities. He was a strong contributor to the external and internal communications program at Parker, and we valued his work.

Sincerely,

Cheryl C. Flohr
Director of Communications, Retired
Parker Aerospace
